
Dennis Levine

At age forty-two, New York printmaker and artist, Dennis Levine continues to create some of the most interesting art in the nation. His experimentation with color and variation of subject matter, ranging from the complex to the whimsical, have brought to Levine a captive audience, always anticipating the release of new works. "Dennis' work is consistently fresh and pertinent. He has a knack for filtering the emotions and scenery of the times onto canvas," Bryce Hammond, Brooklyn Museum of Art.

Originally trained as an illustrator and cartographer, Levine made his transition into fine art via etching and serigraphy. In addition to his printmaking talents, he has created over 100 murals nationwide. His works have been featured in numerous individual and group exhibitions.

Recent sabbaticals to France and Israel have given Levine an even broader sense of culture from which to draw inspiration.
